STAR OF THE SEAS

A stellar new ship prepares to set sail.

The French cruise company Ponant will expand its luxury fleet this April with the addition of Le Lyrial (www.ponant.com), a 122-cabin ship designed by the architect Jean-Philippe Nuel. Named for the Northern Hemisphere's Lyra constellation, the new vessel will take to the seas in high style, sporting contemporary leather furnishings, glossy wood-paneled walls, and floor-to-ceiling windows. Unlike its namesake, however, Le Lyrial

will not be confined to a single hemisphere: Following an inaugural season cruising the Mediterranean, Adriatic, and Aegean seas, the ship will head south for the icy shores of Antarctica. —JACKIE CARADONIO

SMALL WONDER

VIRGINIA'S INN AT Little Washington has long drawn East Coast epicures with its whimsical design and 10-course "gastronaut's" menu.

Following nearly three years of renovations, the Relais & Châteaux property has now expanded its domain with the addition of the Parsonage (www.innatlittlewashington.com), a Victorian-era mansion located across the street from the inn. The London-based designer Joyce Conwy Evans—who was responsible for the original inn's eclectic interiors more than 30 years ago—led the renovation of the seven-room annex, which made its debut in April. Her creation is a perfect match for its predecessor's theatrical style, featuring Tunisian tiles, English fabrics, French antiques, and Carrara-marble bathrooms. A foyer draped with a tent of green and white fabric hosts the Parsonage's cocktail hour, which is frequently followed by a walk across Main Street to visit chef Patrick O'Connell's award-winning restaurant for Maine lobster or truffle-stuffed pheasant. —J.C.
